sur l'art des iconoclastes, elles pourraient nous en fournir de très précieux sur la transformation de l'art byzantin qui aboutit à la floraison iconographique de l'époque des Paléologues.

On voit par ces quelques exemples quels trésors d'iconographie chrétienne les peintures cappadociennes nous ont conservés et ce sera l'honneur du R. Père de Jerphanion d'avoir pu les restituer à l'histoire de l'art médiéval.

A Sa'idic Fragment of the Martyrdom of St. Philotheus

During a visit to the monasteries of the Wādi 'n-Naṭrūn in 1928 a friend of mine, Šukrī Eff. 'Irian, a draftsman of the Egyptian Survey Department at Gizeh, found at the Monastery of al-Baramūs two complete leaves of a MS. which originally contained the account of the Martyrdom of St. Philotheus.

These leaves bear the pagination $\overline{\pi\epsilon}$, $\overline{\pi\epsilon}$ (sic), $\overline{\pi\theta}$ and $\overline{\pi\zeta}$ measure 27×18 cm., and the number of lines per folio varies between 21 and 23. Letters which begin new paragraphs are drawn out on the margins with coloured ornamentation and with the sign $\div$ placed above most of them. From the scribe's hand it would seem that our leaves may be assigned to the eleventh century. There are two Arabic notes by a later hand, the one in the right margin of folio $\overline{\pi\epsilon}^r$ is placed opposite the Coptic words $\alpha\kappa\epsilon\lambda\epsilon\gamma\epsilon\epsilon\tau\rho\epsilon\gamma\delta\omega\pi\epsilon$ and reads وامر ان ياخذ , the other in the right margin of folio $\overline{\pi\epsilon}^v$ appears to be يبدل فظير which was probably intended to explain the Coptic expression $\zeta\epsilon\eta\zeta\epsilon\eta\beta\omicron\upsilon\eta\epsilon\gamma\rho\omicron\eta\ \overline{\pi\omega}\alpha\alpha\rho$.

The most important material which we possess for the Life and Martyrdom of St. Philotheus is as follows:

- 1) A complete text (unedited) of the Martyrdom in the Sa'idic dialect: MS. Pierpont Morgan M 583 (5) = Codices coptici photographici expressi bibliothecae Pierpont Morgan, t. XLI, pp. 149-204.
- 2) Two Sa'idic fragments of the Martyrdom edited by W. E. CRUM in Anecdota Oxoniensia, Ser. Semit., t. XII, 1913, pp. 68-73.
- 3) A Sa'idic fragment of the Martyrdom edited by W. TILL in Koptische Heiligen- und Märtyrerlegenden, t. I, 1935, pp. 1-2.
- 4) A Fayyūmic fragment of the Martyrdom edited by H. MUNIER in ASA, t. XVI, 1916, pp. 247-252, and re-edited by L. SAINT-PAUL GIRARD in BIFAO, t. XXII, 1923, pp. 105-113.

- 5) A Sa'idic fragment of a Homily on the Martyrdom published by G. BALESTRI in Bessarione, 2nd. Series, t. IV, 1902-3 pp. 61-69, and re-edited by him in Sacrorum bibliorum fragmenta coptosahidica Musei Borgiani, t. III, 1904, pp. xxxix-xliii.
- 6) Part of a Panegyric on S. Philotheus attributed to Demetrius, Archbishop of Antioch, in the Sa'idic dialect with a mixture of Fayyūmic, edited by J. VERGOTE in Le Muséon, t. XLVIII, 1935, pp. 275-296.
- 7) An Arabic MS. of the Coptic Museum, Old Cairo, No. Hist. 470, which contains a Panegyric on St. Philotheus attributed to Severus, Patriarch of Antioch (unedited) ⁽¹⁾.
- 8) An Arabic MS. of the Coptic Museum, Old Cairo, No. Hist. 480, which contains a history of the Martyrdom (unedited) ⁽²⁾.
- 9) The account of the Life and Martyrdom of St. Philotheus in the Arabic Synaxarium for Ṭubeḥ 16th ⁽³⁾.
- 10) Two Hymns in honour of St. Philotheus in the Dīfnār (Antiphonarium) ⁽⁴⁾.
- 11) Two Ṭurūḥāt in honour of St. Philotheus in MS. No. Lit. 321 of the Coptic Museum, Old Cairo (unedited) ⁽⁵⁾.
- 12) A Bohairic doxology 'Adam' in a Copto-Arabic MS. of the church of the Virgin Mary at-Ḥārat az-Zuwaileh, No. Lit. 90, dated 10 Ṭūt A. M. 1442 = A. D. 1725, (published in the "كتاب التماجيد المقدسه", Cairo 1922, p. 269) and a Bohairic doxology 'Batos' in a MS. of the same church, No. Lit. 89, dated 13 Ḥatūr A. M. 1539 = A. D. 1822 (unedited).

The text of our leaves which is printed below has been collated with that of the Morgan MS. of the Martyrdom by my friend Dr. O. H. E. Burmester who has kindly recorded the variant readings. The corresponding text in the Arabic version of this Martyrdom according to the MS. Hist. 480 of the Coptic Museum, Old Cairo, has also been added.

(fol. 85^r) 'For (γάρ) we are] Christians (χριστιανός) openly (παρρησία), and we fight in the legion (νούμερον)¹ of Christ the great King, the God of Saint (ἅγιος) Philotheus who performs great miracles² before thee (and) destroys thy god and thy magician' (μάγος). The king was exceedingly wrathful with great rage (ὀργή), (and) bade (κελεύειν) them seize Saint (ἅγιος) Philotheus, saying to him: 'Evilly (κακῶς) hast thou come in to me³, O (ὦ) lawless (ἄτακτος) (one). I have spared thee⁴, that thou mayest act wisely, (and) thou hast not done (so). (fol. 85^r) For (γάρ) thou hast destroyed my great god who giveth me victory in battle (πόλεμος)⁵, likewise (ὁμοίως) the magician (μάγος); after this, my three generals (στρατηλάτης), and their 900 soldiers⁶ thou hast also bewitched (μαγεύειν). By the might of the Romans (ῥωμαῖος), I will cause thy body (σῶμα)⁷ to be cut to pieces'. And the king in great fury (θυμός) bade (κελεύειν) them stretch him out by means of four thongs (λῶρος), (and) beat him with straps (βούνευρον)⁸ of raw hides⁹ until his tender flesh (σάρξ) (fol. 86) dropped off little by little¹⁰. After this he bade (κελεύειν) (them) pour vinegar and quick-lime (κονία) into his mouth¹¹. The king said to him: 'Thou hast tasted¹² the beginning (ἀρχή) of the tortures (βάσανος), O (ὦ) Philotheus, wilt thou sacrifice (θυσιάζειν), or not'? The holy one answered: 'It will never happen to me that I forsake my Lord Jesus Christ, O (ὦ) dragon (δράκων) that art in the abyss; but (δέ) rather (μᾶλλον) thou hast bestowed upon me great confidence to-day by reason of this little torture (βάσανος) that thou hast given to me¹³, in that I was worthy to be punished (κολάζειν) (fol. 87) for the Name of Jesus Christ, but (ἀλλά) I am not afflicted by these¹⁴; I was as they that¹⁵ are cheered (εὐφραίνειν) with wine'. Now (δέ) the king Diocletian was wrathful when he heard these (things), (and) he bade (κελεύειν) them cast him into prison (lit. a strong place), bind him with iron chains (ἄλυσις), and raise up upon him a great stone of four kentenarion (κεντηνάριον)¹⁶ until the morrow. At that moment the archangel (ἀρχάγγελος) Raphael descended from heaven¹⁷.

⁸ literally 'bull's sinews'. — ⁹ M. omits 'of raw hides'. — ¹⁰ M. adds 'upon the ground'. — ¹¹ M. has 'into his wounds'. — ¹² M. has 'thou hast experienced'. — ¹³ M. has 'to my body'. — ¹⁴ M. omits 'I am not afflicted by these'. — ¹⁵ M. has 'as he that'. — ¹⁶ κεντηνάριον is a weight of 100 pounds. After this king Diocletian summoned Saint Philotheus and said to him: 'Lo, see now thou hast destroyed the gods and the people together, and I ask thee now to obey me and to sacrifice to the revered gods'. Saint Philotheus said to him: 'This shall never be that I forsake my God, the Lord Jesus Christ, and worship unclean idols'. When the king heard this he was exceedingly wrathful, and he bade them bind the Saint and beat him with leather straps. They did this to him until his flesh was cut through, and his blood began to flow upon the earth like water. When the king saw this, he bade them pour into his wounds vinegar and quicklime, and they did this to him, and they rubbed his wounds with hair rags. The Saint said to the king: 'Thou hast given to my soul and body great repose, and they rejoice with the Lord Jesus Christ, in that I was worthy to be tortured for His Holy Name'. On hearing this speech, the king bade them lead away the Saint into a hidden and narrow place, and bind him with iron chains, and they did this to him, and they went away. And when it was midnight, the archangel Raphael appeared to him.
