SOME UNPUBLISHED SAHIDIC FRAGMENTS OF THE OLD TESTAMENT.

THE publication of Mr Crum's Catalogue of Coptic MSS shews that the British Museum contains a number of Sahidic fragments of the Old Testament which have never been printed in that dialect. Unfortunately several of the larger fragments are palimpsest, and more or less—generally more—illegible; but even apart from these there are quite a number of smaller unedited fragments. Of these latter I here publish a few, the results of two fleeting visits to the Museum en passage. The faulty and incomplete decipherment of some of the more illegible fragments will, I hope, be excused, as my time was on both occasions limited to a few hours, and I have had no opportunity of revising my copies.

Except in the case of one or two papyrus fragments, I have not thought it worth while to reproduce the original lines and columns, but I have kept the punctuation and diacritical marks of the MSS.

Variants from the Septuagint I have noted after each fragment, using the Cambridge edition for collation. In most cases these variants agree very closely, as one would expect, with the Septuagint MSS which are known to have been written in Egypt: there is, however, one interesting variant in a passage of Hosea, where the Sahidic version agrees not with the Septuagint version nor even with the ordinary received Hebrew text, but with Theodotion's version and with a modern conjectural redistribution of the Hebrew letters.

One or two of the fragments I found had been already published by Dr von Lemm in his Sahidische Bibelfragmente. Of those I have merely given the few variants between my readings and his.

Or. 3579 A (4) [= Crum 5].—Parchment; a double leaf, $12\frac{1}{4} \times 9\frac{3}{4}$ in.; paged $\overline{\text{I}\Theta}$, $\overline{\text{K}}$; $\overline{\text{K}\Theta}$ (sic), $\overline{\text{KH}}$. The text is a lectionary, in two columns of 26 lines each, written in a large, coarse character (cf. Ciasca, i, Tab. ii). From it I publish Exod. ii 24 and Num. x 33–xi 8.

Variants from Greek :—

v 11. τὸ λόγιον τοῦ Ἱσραήλ] 'the word of the holy one of Israel'.

12. ὁ ἅγιος] 'the Lord, the holy one', agreeing with ⲛ A O Q, which add κύριος.

ἡ̅π̅ε̅ι̅θ̅ῆ̅σ̅α̅τε̅ το̅ῖς̅ λό̅γο̅ις̅ το̅ῦ̅τοις̅] 'are disbelieving'.

At the end of the verse the copyist has repeated the beginning of it Ἑ̅τ̅β̅ε̅π̅αι̅-ἁ̅τ̅π̅α̅ρ̅τ̅ε̅, owing to the recurrence of Ἑ̅τ̅β̅ε̅π̅αι̅ at the beginning of ver. 13.

13. πόλεως ὀχυρᾶς] The Coptic omits ὀχυρᾶς, like A.

π̅τ̅ῶ̅μα̅] 'its fall'; agreeing with O, which adds αὐτῆς.

² ⲡ̅Ⲛ̅ⲱ̅ⲧ̅ = κεράμιον, not in Peyron's lexicon.

Pap. LV (1) [= Crum 46].—A papyrus fragment containing part of a column of small uncial writing. The text on the recto is Isa. xliii 4–6. The verso is almost illegible: I reproduce what I thought I could see of it, but most of the letters are quite uncertain, and I cannot identify it. Probably it is either verse 8 or 11 of the same chapter. With more time at one's disposal and the Bohairic text by one, it might possibly be deciphered to a certain extent.

transposing the two clauses. It would, therefore, agree with N^{ca} in reading $\psi\chi\eta\varsigma$: at any rate $\phi\omega\eta\acute{\iota}$ is not the subject of $\acute{\epsilon}\kappa\lambda\upsilon\theta\eta\sigma\epsilon\tau\alpha\iota$, as $\text{ZPOO}\tau$ is masc., and the subject of that verb is fem.—presumably the daughter of Zion.

Recto, col. 1 ll. 7-8. Possibly ⲙⲛ ⲡⲧⲉⲧⲛ; but it is hardly long enough.

Verso, col. 1 ll. 2-3. Read ⲁⲩⲧⲣⲓⲕⲉ (?).

The few letters of the second column of the verso are very illegible, though doubtless, with the Bohairic text to help one, one might make them out. Unfortunately I had not that assistance with me, and could only use it later. Following that text, ll. 5-9 should probably read ⲟⲣ[ϣⲁⲛⲟⲥ] ⲟⲩⲁⲉ [ⲙⲉⲡⲟⲩ]† ⲉ[ⲧⲛⲟⲩ ⲉⲡⲓ]ⲉⲁⲛ.

Variant from Greek:—

23. καὶ ἐξέκλιναν] om. καὶ with B* vid Q.

Or. 3579 A (5) [=Crum 56].—From the same lectionary as the fragment of Isa. xxx already given. The following passage from Hosea (vi 6-10) comes from an earlier page numbered ⲡⲛⲉ. It is the end of a lesson, and is followed by an extract from Job.

8. τὰ πόδια ἑξ ἑσέως] 'her heel is one of blood'. This variant is remarkable, as Tattam's Bohairic text agrees with the Septuagint, whereas the Sahidic reading follows the Hebrew or Theodotion's version. According to Nowack (Hand-Kom. zum A. T.) the ordinary Hebrew reading is מִדְּמַם כָּבֵד 'voller Blutspuren', but Bachman proposed a different division of the consonants, reading מִדְּמַם כָּבֵד 'ihre Fersen d. i. Fusstapfen sind Blut'. This is obviously the reading that our Sahidic text and Theodotion are translating; so that Bachman's suggestion would appear to be a genuine ancient variant. At any rate the Sahidic is quite distinct from the Septuagint, which is derived from a MS reading מִדְּ (water) instead of מִדְּמַם. Theodotion's reading is ἡ πτέρνα αὐτῆς ἀφ' αἵματος.

9. ὁδόν] 'the way of the Lord', as A Q (ὁδὸν κυ), but not the Boh. After ἀνομίαν is added 'in Israel', apparently from the beginning of the next verse.

Brit. Mus. Or. 3579 A (11), fol. 22 [=Crum 14], containing Judges xii 7-xiii 6, has already been published by O. von Lemm³; and my copy only records two variants ⲁⲃⲓⲥⲁⲡ for von Lemm's ⲁⲃⲁⲥⲁⲡ in xii 8, and ⲡⲥⲁⲃⲟⲩⲗⲱⲡⲓⲧⲏⲕ for his ⲡⲥⲁⲩⲗⲱⲡⲓⲧⲏⲕ in xii 12. In this fragment, too, the agreement of the Coptic version with A against the other Septuagint MSS is noticeable, as the following variants from the Cambridge Septuagint shew:—

- xii 12. ἐν Αἰλώμ] 'in ΕΛΙΕΕ'; cf. ἐν Αἰλειμ A.
 13. Ἑλλά] ΚΗΛΛΗΕΕ; cf. Σελλάμ A, and so verse 15.
 φαραθωνείτης] ΦΡΔΘΩΠΙΤΗΣ Copt. and A, and so verse 15.
 15. φαραθώμ] ΦΔΡΔΘΩ.
 Ἀμαλήκ] ΛΔΠΔΚ Copt. and A.
 xiii 2. Σαράλ] ΣΔΡΔΔ Copt. and A.
 Δανεί] ΔΔΠ Copt. and A.
 3. The Coptic adds 'thou shalt be with child', like A (καὶ ἐν γαστρὶ ἔξεις).
 συλλήμψῃ] 'bear', Copt.; cf. τέξῃ A.
 4. μέθυσμα] ΕΕΘΥCΙΑ Η CΙΚΕΡΔ Copt.; σίκερα alone A.
 5. ἔχεις] future tense in Copt. as in A (ἔξεις).
 ναζείρ] ΠΔΖΩΡΔΙΟC; cf. ἡγιασμένον ναζειραῖον A. ἄρξεται τοῦ σώσαι] 'shall save'.

In the same article von Lemm also publishes Brit. Mus. Or. 3579 A (27) [Crum 39], Prov. iv 13, 14, 17, 18, 22, 23, 27. My copy offers the following variants: 14 ΕΠΕΡΕΕΟΟ[ΥΕ] ΕΠΕΡΕΕΟΟ[ΥΕ] ρΠΠΕΡΕΙΟ[ΟΥΕ].

23. ΠΡΕΙΟΟΥΕ ςΔΡ and two lines of dots] ρΠΡΕΙΟΟΥΕ ςΔΡ ρΠ. Only the tops of the last two letters are visible, and they are very doubtful. There is no second line visible according to my copy.

27. ΠΠΕΡΕΙ[ΟΟΥ]Ε ΕΤΡΕΙΟ[ΠΠΕΕ] ΠΠΕΡΕΙ[ΟΟΥ]Ε ΕΤΡΕΙΟ[ΠΠΕΕ].
