Den Schluß aller drei Stelen bildet die für Nubien typische Formel: (Der Verstorbene) möge ruhen im Schoße Abrahams, Isaaks und Jakobs (ÄZ 60 S. 135). A. Mallon weist in seiner Epigraphie copte (vgl. Dict. d'Archéologie chrétienne III, 2, Spalte 2825) darauf hin, daß der Gebrauch der Wendung wohl zurückzuführen ist auf die Evangelienstellen Lc 13 28 und Mt 8 11. 138 43 leitet den Wunsch ein mit ⲛⲉⲙ ⲭⲟⲩⲉⲓⲥ ⲓⲥ ⲭⲥ ⲛⲁⲭⲓ ... 9941 und 9995 fügen Abraham, Isaak, Jakob unmittelbar an die Datierung an. Vollständig erhalten ist der Schluß nur auf 9995, das noch »Es geschehe! Amen!« mit anschließt. (Vgl. dazu ÄZ 60 S. 133, Revillout, Rev. égyptol. IV S. 4 Nr. 4 und S. 32 Nr. 46 und 50. Annales VIII S. 86 Nr. 12.)

by W. E. Crum.

(19. Bathwick Hill in Bath, England.)

A number of small fragments of Coptic papyri (about 40 in all) were entrusted to me, I think in 1918, by B. P. Grenfell, for eventual publication in one of the Egypt Exploration Society's volumes, but they were never so used; indeed scarcely any would be worth publication¹. Nothing upon the sheets between which they lie indicates their provenance—nothing at least, which anyone now alive is able to interpret. The month of excavation is recorded upon each sheet, but no year, and there is usually an indication of the period to which, judging by the Greek found with it, the fragment might be assigned: "with 4th—6th cent(ury) pap(yri)", or "with 5th—6th cent."

With the papyri lay the parchment fragments here published: A a half-leaf, B a tolerably complete leaf, the former measuring 7.5×5 cm., the latter 10×8 cm. There is no proof that they were contiguous leaves. The format of the volume whence they came classes them beside a few other minute Coptic codices, such as BM. 936, 941, 943, 947, Ryl. 7². None of these is from the White Monastery.

¹) The Exploration Society, to which the fragments presumably belong, has no objection to the present publication. ²) V. BMCatal., p. XIII.

Among the sites excavated by Grenfell and Hunt only Oxyrhynchus, I think, yielded manuscripts of such a relatively late date, so that these fragments probably came thence³. Script is, here as elsewhere, still an uncertain guide towards dating. Characteristic letters are: α angular, in 2 strokes; β lower loop curved, not angular (cf. Washington Deuteron.); ε, ϵ generally straight-backed, top detached (cf. Pistis, 2d hand in Hyvernât's Album II, Crum Copt. MSS., Pl. I, Schubart Pap. Gr. Berol. 43b); λ in 2 strokes; υ fully angular, in 3 strokes; ο not smaller than the rest; π cross-stroke slightly projecting; ρ short-tailed; τ both ends of cross-stroke thickened and pendant; ϛ leans to right, in 1 looped stroke, thinning at both points (so also χ, ξ); ϕ the upright protrudes further up than down; ω tops of 3 prongs level. Such features, taken together, place the script close beside the "square" hand (B) of the Freer Psalter (ed. Worrell, Pl. II) and point to the 5th, or rather to the 6th⁴ century as time of writing.

The text shows the remnants of a church calendar, the months involved being Parmoute and Pashons on fol. B, and others, perhaps Paremhatp and Parmoute, on fol. A. If the MS. was unearthed at Oxyrhynchus, one would expect the calendar to have been in use there; whether in a church or in a monastery it is impossible to say⁵. Part of a Greek calendar from this diocese was published in POxy. XI (no. 1357)⁶, but it has no resemblance to ours. The saints who figure here include patriarchs, prophets, apostles and ascetes, besides the martyrs. Many names are but half legible now, of some scarcely a letter is certain. The ink, especially on B, has much faded, while A has been shrivelled by damp. The sequence of the pages of B should be decided by the traces, faint but undoubted, of page-numbers in the top corners of both⁷; that on the verso might be λ. The appearance of fol. A suggests the sequence here adopted, but the names Matthias and Constantine, which, in the Synaxarium, both fall in Paremhatp, perhaps require the reverse order. Days are not easy to distinguish one from another, except on B recto; on the analogy of that page and of other calendars⁸ one may assume that each day opens with a name and that the others, included under the same day, are those preceded by υυ- "and".

³) Apart from his excavations, Grenfell bought a good many Coptic papyri: in Fayyûm, at Achmîm and further south; but the circumstances of the present MS. show that it was not among these.

⁴) Schubart Gr. Paläog. 144 inclines to the later date for Greek hands of this type.

⁵) Both were plentiful, in and around the town; v. Preuschen, Pallad. und Ruf. 29.

⁶) Cf. Delehayé in An. Boll. XLII, 83.

⁷) These may of course be quire-, not page-numbers; if so, the sequence would be reversed.

⁸) As the early Syriac calendar, ed. Wright.

The abbreviations here used are those of my Coptic Dictionary, with the following additions: Ab = graffiti at Abydos, copied by Miss A. Calverley, 1927–28 (given me by the late Prof. Griffith); Ce = Cemeteries of Abydos, Peet and Loat, III, 38, 39; Cp = Synaxarium Eccl. Constantinopol. (Acta SS. Novemb.); Del = Les Martyrs d'Égypte, H. Delehayé, reprint from An. Boll. XL; DG = Rock Tombs of Deir el-Gebrâwi, N. de G. Davies, pl. XXIX; Den = Graffiti from W. of Denderah, copied by N. de G. Davies, 1900–01⁹; Eng = stele from Baouit ed. R. Engelbach in Bull. Assoc. Amis Art copte III, 6; Mél = Mélanges d'Archéol. égypt. et assyr. II, 175.

Lines numbered consecutively, omitting those of no importance.

A recto.

3. 16th (?). Lot, the brother of . . . A hermit so named in the Fayyûm, PG 65 253. Some one at any rate of the name was venerated, cf. name Apa Lôt near Antinoë, BIF. II, 63. Or is the name incomplete? Cf. Παλώτις.
4. Judas. Apostle or Jacob's son? The former on 25th Paône in Synax.
5. Apa Pni, invoked Ab, Den and no doubt Hall 145, l. 17. Πνέι in Preisigke Namenb.
6. Macarius of T . . . Tkôou suggests itself, but his day is 27th Paôpe in Synax.
7. Apa Sabinus. Not in Synax, but there is an Egyptian martyr in Cp, 12th March.
8. Four[teen] (or [Twenty]four, or [Thirty]four) Martyrs [of] Pape. This place, if the name is complete, should be Luxor, which is hardly probable here.
9. Esa[ias]. The prophet occurs in Abû'l-Barakât's calendar on 22d Paône (PO. X, 274). Herouoj, martyr on 16th Koiahk in Synax.
10. Sirène (Serenus), the renuntiant (ἀποτακ.), who was . . . in the desert. A hermit in PG 65 417; the same? venerated in Ab, Saq no. 219. With this epithet he can scarcely be the martyr, who appears beside Phoebammôn in a vision (Mor 46, 52) and who perhaps had a μαρτύριον at Oxyrhynchus (POxy. 1911, 92).
13.]mpati recalls the place Tase-mpoti, though that seems to be in the Delta (Amélineau Géog. 415). The situation of Tampeti would be more appropriate (l. c. 479, Preisigke Wbuch III, 331).
15.]ôt may be "father", or (?) Ebôt-Abydos, as in Baouit and elsewhere.

⁹) I also have photographs of these from Dr. H. A. Winkler.

verso.

16. Pet]re (Peter). The name recurs in DG, MIF 59 477, Saq 226, Ce 38, but cannot be identified. Apa Hlo (for Hello) thus spelt Ce 39; Hllo in WS no. 32.
17. Apa Amoun (or (?) Pamoun), the man of Tamah. Of the several saints of these names none is connected with Tamah, spelt Tammah (Till HM I 81). Tamma (Miss IV 759) is probably the same. Cf. Pamoun, mentioned in the last with Paul of T.
18. Matthias, the Apostle on 8th Paremhatp in Synax.
22. [Apa] John of Pake is well known. According to Saq. no. 226 his day should fall in Paremhatp or Parmoute. V. Thompson's references ib. no. 27, and for the place Coptic Dict. 286b¹⁰.
23. Papnoute probably, but which of them?
24. Mi]ne for Mina, Mëna, as in MIF 59, WS etc. Or? Harmine (ⲉⲣⲓⲣⲓⲛⲟⲥ BM 986, -ⲙⲓⲛⲉ Saq 7), an Oxyrhynchite saint, Synax 2d Koiahk.
25. Consta]ntine, the righteous (δικαίος) king, on 28th Paremhatp in Synax.
26. Apa Hermauô, invoked Hall 143. Should be from the Aphrodito neighbourhood, judging by the popularity of the name there. His church PCairo II, 67138.

B recto.

28. 28th (Parmoute). Philip. The apostle's day is 18th Hathôr in Synax and at the White Monastery (P 129¹⁸, 102).
29. 29th (Parmoute). Apa Kermane (Germanus), *martyr*¹¹. One so named at Alexandria on 29th April (Del 72) = 4th Pashons; another (?) in AM 156, WS nos. 36, 48, Saq no. 240.
30. Apa Paul of (the monastery of?) Apa Pshoi. Or perhaps alludes to the friendship of the two (Synax 7th Paôpe). They appear side by side in Den and DG.
31. Leôn(?) A rare and among Monophysites surely ill-omened name¹². Might it be equivalent to Moui, (A)pamoui? Cf. TT. 75n. Hôr recurs again at 56. It is difficult to identify them.
32. 30th (Parmoute). *Mariham*¹³ (Miriam), the Prophetess. In no other calendar or list.

¹⁰) Thence too another martyr, Hor of ⲧⲛⲟⲟⲩⲥ (T. Mina Epima 7), of which ⲧⲱⲭⲓ in the Boh. version (C 43, 127) is probably a distortion. ¹¹) This monogram in Ab, and in dates, e. g. P 129¹⁵, 127, ib. 129¹⁶, 105, ib. 131¹⁷, 51. Cf. Landschoot

Rec. de Colophons I, 2, p. 125. But these and others in Sa'id. mss. are without cross-stroke; in Boh. (Nitrian) MSS. it is present: Hyvernât Alb. XXIII, XXVII, XL etc.

¹²) Wessely XX, 235, PLond II p. 329, POx. 1162. ¹³) So spelt in Sa'id.

(Num 12 1 Dtn 24 9). <https://coptic-treasures.com/>

33. Apa Amoun. In 17 another of the name. Apa Jon[as (?)].
34. Pashons.
35. Ist. Benjamin, the Patriarch. The MS. is too old to include the Patriarch of Alexandria (ob. 662), whom Synax commemorates on 8th Tôbe¹⁴. This must, then, be Jacob's son, though I have not found him in any other list. Cf. 48 Manasse.
36. Apa Dioscorus. Hardly room for "the Patriarch" after the name; besides his day is 7th Thôth. A martyr so named C 43, 202 (cf.? Del 208), the same (?) Ce 39. Another, with Asclepius, Leyd. p. 187, Abû Sâlih p. 36.
37. Apa Moses, the righteous (δικαιος). In 20 another of the name. Moses of Abydos, so often invoked there¹⁵, might deserve this epithet. His day at the White Monastery was 25th Epêp¹⁶.
38. Barnabes (sic). His day in Synax is 21st Koiahk¹⁷. Apa Klo[, the righteous (δικ.)], probably Klouj = Colluthus (v. Byz. Z. XXX, 323), though in Synax and at the White Monastery¹⁸ his day is the 25th of this month.
39. 2d. Apa Papnoute of Pma n . . . Others of this name in 23 (?), 58.
40. Apa Siôn, a common name in these parts: BM 1013, 1076, Ryl 282 etc.; but I have not met with the eponymous saint. The last 8 letters in a later hand and ink.
41. 3d. Apa John. If this were the patriarch, ob. 503 (4th of this month in Synax), he would probably bear that title here.
42. Apa Eudaemôn, martyr. One of the few names on which our text and Synax¹⁹ agree. Suffered under Arian at Pergai (Bilgai), near Antinoe. Invoked MIF. 59 nos. 389, 398 and presumably Hall 143, Ce 39. His namesake of Pouaeit (T. Mina Epima 31 = C 43, 150) should be another martyr, as E. of Ermont (Synax 18th Mesore) certainly is.
43. Apa . . .]mate, the great Cf.? Sarmate (-ta), invoked Saq. no. 26 etc.
44. 4th. Apa I[ou]le (Julius), a common name, whilst Nile (Nilus) is not. The eponym of countless Apa Joulis (especially in the Fayyûm²⁰) is probably the Heracleopolite martyr of 21st Tôbe²¹.
45. 5th. Ma[. . .]e. I will hazard nothing.

¹⁴) Cf. BM. no. 971. ¹⁵) M. A. Murray Osireion 39. ¹⁶) Wessely, Stud. IX, 67. ¹⁷) The name B. 15th Paône (PO. X, 273) is of doubtful reading.

¹⁸) Leyd. p. 203, BM. 146. ¹⁹) Forget's edition only and in Malan's Calendar.

²⁰) V. Krall p. 199, Wessely VIII, p. 287. ²¹) Morgan XLI, 345.

verso.

46. Taurinus, invoked several times at Baouit (MIF 59, nos. 388, 448, 452), once (448) as from Tapr The name Apa T. (Ryl 178, MR I, 66) testifies to his veneration. His church at Shmûn Kr no. 1, 16. Apa Paul, thus unspecified, in most lists (Ce, Den, DG, WS etc.). Paul of Tamah suggests himself.
47. Apa Shamoun, unknown. The name only Saq no. 195. Perhaps abbreviated from Shenamoun²². John, without a place-name as here, in Ab, Ce.
48. Manasse, the Patriarch. Like Benjamin in 35, M. appears in no other list.
49. Apa Apollo, of Baouit, or another? V. BM 322 n. for namesakes. The "prophet and archimandrite", who is perhaps he of Baouit invoked in countless inscriptions, is commemorated on 20th Paône²³, a date not unsuitable here.
50. Leuei (? Levi), the renunciant (ἀποτακτικός). The name in BM 1076 only.
51. Apa Maximinus of Piom (Arsinoe). Reading uncertain. A saint so named is invoked Mél. II 175. Cf. (?) Maximus of Shenaro, a place in or near the Fayyûm (T. Mina op. cit. 7 = C 43, 127, BM 692).
52. Michaias, the Prophet, on 22d Mesorê in Synax.
53. Lilamôn. Reading uncertain, but Nilamôn not possible. The name Saq no. 96. As Lilamou in BM 1235, 1252, from Fayyûm. Apa Paêse, mentioned C 43, 202, AM 165 (leg. Paêsi), WS no. 29 and may be the disciple (?) of Apollo²⁴. Presumably not P., brother of Thecla (Till HM I, 71ff.).
54. Apa Aphou, probably the well-known bishop of Oxyrhynchus²⁵. Whether A., surnamed "the Flame"²⁶, and invoked in Ab, is the same we cannot as yet tell. Ab names two: A. ⲡⲁⲱⲓ and A. ⲡⲁⲱⲓ²⁷, bishop of Pemje (Oxyrh.).
55. Apa Hale, martyr, invoked WS nos. 55, 56. "The holy (ἅγιος) Apa Hare", whose τόπος is named in Ryl 143, may be this saint. Peshêw (or Neshêw), unknown name. If a person, the absence of Apa is strange.
56. Apa Hôr, our father. If this means "our abbot", or "founder", the calendar should be monastic. Hôr occurs twice in our text, just as there are two in WS 55 and in 56. Cf. "our father" as abbot in Bodl. P d, 17 and "the holy Peter, our father", Baouit I, 51.

57. Απα Kouī, of Psammoou. Akoui of Iom (Arsinoe) invoked WS no. 55, so that name is probably intended here. It recurs (with Apa) in Saq no. 232. The place-name recalls Τέρτον Σαμοού, BGU. 552, in the Hermopolite nome ²⁸.

It is evident that we have here a calendar very different from that corresponding to the Synaxarium, either in the usual (Nitrian) recension, or in that from Upper Egypt represented by Paris arabe 4869—70 ²⁹. Nor does it appear to resemble the Proprium of the White Monastery, so far as we can reconstruct that from the fragmentary Directories ³⁰. The saints named in our fragment are, in great part, from among those venerated in Middle Egypt and since the MS. was in all probability found at Oxyrhynchus, we may assume them to have been especially familiar in that diocese. Most of these names are to be met with in the invocation-lists on Middle-Egyptian epitaphs or graffiti and several of the less familiar among them are unknown in the southern Thebaid. Some reappear in the groups of subordinate martyrs who figure in the Acta ³¹, for instance in those of Anoub, Epime, Didymus, Pater, groups representing perhaps saints honoured in the neighbourhood of the scene of the martyrdom in question.

The biblical characters include some unexpected names: Benjamin, Miriam, Manasse. Their appearance here I leave others to account for ³².

There are other features of this text which might attract the attention of liturgiologists. For instance, the use of the title Απα, borne by a majority of the persons named and doubtless by more when the pages were complete. It looks as if the word were applied here to the local saints ³³, but in the lists on stelae and graffiti its use is often wider than that. The epithets δίκαιος and ἀποτακτικός need more special treatment than I can give. The former is sometimes applied to the children of Adam in general ³⁴, occasionally to the Christian emperors ³⁵ and in the Diptychs, for some obscure reason, to a few names only ³⁶. The latter may or may not indicate a particular class of ascete³⁷. Pachôm is described as an ἀποτ. and his community as ζῶντων ναποτακτικός³⁸ dwelling together; but Antony too is the ταξιάρχης ημιμοναχός ναποτ.³⁹ Amonk's epitaph calls him ἀποτ., ἀναχωρητής and πολιτευτής⁴⁰. In Greek texts the word is rare and almost seems to be an independent title⁴¹.

Von Prof. D. Dr. Martin Dibelius in Heidelberg.

Carl Schmidt, den wir mit diesen Aufsätzen grüßen wollten und dessen wir nun wehmütig gedenken, hat sich mit der Neu-Ausgabe und Kommentierung des koptischen Textes von Didache 10, 3—12, 1 (in dieser Zeitschrift 1925, 81 ff.) ein nicht geringes Verdienst erworben. Es war nötig, Horners Ausgabe zu ergänzen; es war vor allem nötig, das Augenmerk weiterer Kreise auf die Besonderheiten dieses Textes zu lenken. Und mir scheint auch Schmidt diese Besonderheiten noch nicht völlig ausgewertet zu haben. Mir wenigstens ist, seit ich durch Schmidts Anzeige in der DLZ 1924 Sp. 95 zum erstenmal auf das koptische Fragment der Apostellehre hingewiesen wurde, an einer Variante des Kopten (10, 4) ein anderes Verständnis des 10. Kapitels aufgegangen, das auch für die Interpretation des 9. Kapitels seine Bedeutung hat. Es handelt sich um die immer noch nicht geklärte Vorgeschichte und Herkunft dieser Mahl-Gebete.

Die Verwandtschaft dieser Texte mit jüdischen Gebeten in hebräischer Sprache ist oft betont worden¹. In der Tat bieten gewisse jüdische Gebete (Segenssprüche vor Tisch, das große Nachtischgebet Birkath hammason, Benediktionen zum Schma' u. a.), z. T. schon von der Mischna, Berakoth VI 1, vorausgesetzt, wertvolle Parallelen aus einer reichen Überlieferung. Aber sie reichen gerade für Wesentliches
